

PARKING PROBLEMS BEFORE COUNCIL AT MONDAY'S MEETING

At the regular meeting of the City Council last Monday evening, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding, a petition was received, signed by many residents, asking for a reserve parking space in front of Goldie's Tire Shop. The city clerk was instructed to notify all those who signed the petition, as well as all property owners along Mission street, to be present at the next regular meeting, May 28, when action will be taken on this matter.

The light committee ordered a light placed on Citrus avenue and Miriam street.

The ordinance committee reported the ordering of Stop signs to be placed at the corners of Templeton avenue and Brunswick street and Templeton avenue and Hanover street.

The light committee reported receiving a map from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, showing the location of all street lights and candle power, in the city. This will be used by the committee in the making of several changes in the lighting system of this city.

The library committee reported that department progressing nicely, a total of 2,514 books having been issued last month.

Dr. Rankin spoke about parking space on the hill section, and suggested that the city use that part of Bepler street that is thought to belong to the city. As this involves a legal question, the city attorney and city engineer were appointed to report all about this matter at the next meeting.

City Attorney McCurdy explained the provisions of Ordinance No. 92, stating that a permit to store more than five gallons of gasoline at any one time must be obtained from the fire marshal. This ordinance carries a penalty for violation of from ten days to six months in jail.

Mayor Smith recommended the purchase of a street sweeping machine of the Elgin type, after some thought and study by the street committee, as this machine can be purchased on the time payment plan and can sweep the entire city twice a week at a small cost, adding to the health and sanitation of our city. The Council decided to purchase the machine. The city attorney was instructed to prepare the necessary papers for the purchase of the machine.

The mayor spoke about the campaign to advertise San Mateo county, and the amount needed for the campaign. This is a plan of the San Francisco Examiner, with a title of "Down the Peninsula Sunshine all the Way," and having a separate page for each city and town. The plan met with the approval of the Council. A. Vireno and John J. Fahey spoke for the Merchants' Association and stated that they would donate $250 toward the campaign.

The weed ordinance for the year was read and adopted.

LUNCHEON AND CARD PARTY TO BE GIVEN BY P. T. A.

A special meeting was held by Crocker-Pershing P. T. A. on May 15, to discuss plans for a whist party to be held on June 6. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Crocker-Pershing schools. A musical program is planned to be held during the evening, and home made cake and coffee will be served after the game.

Plans are being laid for a farewell luncheon in honor of the 1928 graduating class at the Crocker school, to be given during the last week of school.

The next regular meeting will be held on June 5. The new officers will be installed and a program is being planned in honor of Mrs. L. G. Owen, the Seventeenth district president, who will install the officers.

DALY CITY STUDENT WINS HIGH HONORS IN COLLEGE

Sidney Silver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Silver, of 119 Hillcrest Drive, graduated last Wednesday from the University of California, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering. Mr. Silver is a graduate of the schools of Daly City, and has a host of friends in this city who are congratulating him upon his splendid record. Mr. and Mrs. Silver, father and mother of the youthful graduate, Mrs. Bloomenthal, Mrs. Mendelson and Mrs. Gross, of Fettes Springs, a former resident of Daly City, were present at the graduating exercises.

Examination in the Constitution

An examination in the Constitution for teachers desiring to take the same will be given by the San Mateo county board of education on Saturday, May 19, in the intermediate school on Broadway, Redwood City.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TAUGHT TO SAVE

California ranks first in the number of schools participating in school savings, according to a statement issued by Will C. Wood, state superintendent of banks. The state ranks fourth in the number of students who are saving under this plan, and fourth in the amount of net savings resulting. Considering that we rank sixth in population, this shows an interesting development.

"In spite of the excellent comparative position of our state with others in this regard, there is a much greater development of school savings possible," says Mr. Wood. "We have in this state at the present time approximately 5,500 grade and high schools, and only 2,223, or one-half, are participating in the advantages of school savings. The total enrollment in our grade and high schools is in the neighborhood of 1,144,000 and only 536,232 of this number, or one-half, have the facilities of school savings at their disposal. Of the number to whom such facilities are available, only 283,476 participate. It would seem that this percentage of participants is much too low.

"Those children who actually save under the school savings thrift plan constitute, therefore, about 25 per cent of all children attending school in California. What about the other 75 per cent? I sincerely believe that this is a responsibility of both our bankers and teachers.

"The bank balance of our school children at the end of the last fiscal year was $4,548,129, which represented an average school account of $2.04; the average student account was $16.04. Had every school child participated in the school saving plan at this rate, the amazing total of $18,000,000 would have been reached in the savings bank accounts under the school savings plan. It should be the goal of bankers and teachers working together to see that the full possibilities of developing thrift in our school children are realized within the next few years."

DALY CITY GROCERYMAN ANSWERS LAST SUMMONS

Jacob Kobler, who had conducted a grocery store on the corner of Irvington street and Crocker avenue for a number of years, passed away last Tuesday, May 15, after a lingering illness. He was the dearly beloved husband of Mina Kobler, and idolized father of Victor, Arnold and Ernest Kobler and Mrs. Freda Impekoven of Switzerland and Mrs. Henry Fischer of Piedmont, California.

Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend the funeral services this Saturday, May 19, at 1 o'clock, from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., 6154 Mission street. Cremation will be at Mount Olivet cemetery.

BODY OF MAN FOUND IN CABIN NEAR COLMA

Authorities have been unable to establish the identity of a man whose body was found in a cabin near Mussel Rock, west of Colma, last Sunday. Discovery of the body was made by Robert Boyle, aged 18, of San Francisco, who reported his find to Constable S. A. Landini, who took charge of the body, which was later removed to the undertaking establishment of W. C. Lasswell & Co. The remains were interred Monday. The unfortunate man was about 55 years of age, evidently a wanderer, and had been seen lately in the vicinity of the Carroll ranch. He had evidently died from pneumonia.

TO BAN SIGNBOARDS WITHIN CITY LIMITS

The Burlingame city ordinance which prohibits the erection of signboards within the city limits is being studied by City Attorney J. W. Colebird of South San Francisco, with the possibility of such an ordinance being adopted by South San Francisco. It is claimed that such an ordinance is badly needed. "There are 103 signboards in South San Francisco, built by nearly every sign company in the business," said Mayor Eschelbach at the last meeting of the city council.

SKYLINE ROBBER IS SENT TO FOLSOM

Matthew Howard, accused of committing at least five "petting party" robberies on the Skyline boulevard, will spend from one year to life in Folsom prison for second degree robbery. Howard was sentenced last Friday in San Francisco. He was convicted for holding up Lawrence Barmann, San Francisco, on the Skyline boulevard on February 25 and robbing him of $110. Barmann was accompanied by a young woman at the time of the holding up.

CITIZENS APPROVE BUILDING OF SHOP AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Jefferson Union high school will have a shop building and its program of vocational and industrial education will go ahead. This was decreed by the voters of the high school district last Friday.

The proposition submitted at the special election was to raise $25,000 by a tax of 70 cents on the hundred dollar assessed valuation for one year, to provide additional educational facilities in the high school. Daly City, Colma, Pedro and Tobin districts gave the proposition a handsome majority. By over eight to one the coast districts voted "yes." Daly City and Colma voted in favor almost three to one.

Visitation was the only district that cast a majority of negative votes. And this seems to have been due to a misunderstanding on the part of the voters in that district as to what the real issue was and its importance to the boys and girls of the community.

At the mass meeting held in the high school building prior to the election, Professor W. J. Savage, superintendent of schools of the Jefferson school district, suggested the campaign slogan "Build the Shop." This was definite, he said, and gave no room for doubt as to what was to be done with the money when it was raised. "Further," he said, "everyone who has investigated the physical conditions in the auto mechanics department in the high school knows that a shop building is needed."

So "Build the Shop" became the slogan of the campaign, and was spread throughout the district by means of stickers on automobiles, banners carried by high school students marching in procession, and thousands of dodgers distributed throughout the whole high school territory by the students of the school.

Mayor H. H. Smith's committee had undertaken to educate the citizens of the district on the importance of the election and bring the voters to the polls. In this the high school Parent-Teachers' Association rendered valuable aid. From 1 until 8 o'clock on election day the members of this organization kept automobiles busy bringing out the voters. The members of the Lions Club of Daly City, too, did their share in contributing toward the success of the campaign.

The progressive citizens throughout Jefferson Union high school district felt that the good reputation of the whole district must be sustained. To them a vote for the special tax meant a vote for growth and progress. A vote against it was unthinkable. The district could not afford to advertise itself to the rest of California as being opposed to vocational education, and without a shop building Jefferson High could not give vocational courses worthy of the name. Parents who wished for their children the best opportunities that modern education can give would locate in a community where the schools were keeping abreast of the times. And the final count of ballots showed that these progressive citizens voted that the Jefferson Union high school district should offer to the children of home-seekers the best advantages that a modern high school can give.

Throughout the campaign it was pointed out that provision is made by the board of education for the transportation to and from school of the pupils living in all parts of the district. This makes it possible for children living in Visitation or at Rockaway Beach or Salada Beach to attend the high school at Daly City and profit by the opportunities of a modern high school education.

The thanks of the members of the board of education, meeting in regular session on last Tuesday evening, were expressed for the assistance given during the campaign by the Lions Club, the high school Parent-Teachers' Association, the student body of the high school, and the members of the various campaign committees throughout the high school district. Special reference was made to the aid given by the Daly City Record in publishing articles relative to the issues of the election.

A resolution was also passed thanking Mayor H. H. Smith, Dr. A. H. Rankin and Mr. J. Twisten for the generous donations they had made to provide advertising material for the campaign.

Damage Suit Result of Crash

A miscellaneous shower was given Miss Margaret Darragh and Mr. Elliott Fisher, pastor of the Daly City Methodist church, by members of the church and friends, at the church last Friday evening. The evening was featured by community singing, a mock wedding, a romance, and the opening of the many gifts received by the young couple. Coffee and home made cake were served.

FORMER RESIDENT OF DALY CITY DROWNED IN RUSSIAN RIVER

Death transformed a happy picnic party on Russian river into a grim tragedy Sunday when Mrs. Celestia Wright, aged 25, was drowned within sight of her 4-year-old son as her husband made a heroic effort to rescue her.

The husband, Albert C. Wright, narrowly escaped a similar fate when his frantic wife pulled him beneath the surface of the river as he reached her side and attempted to save her.

Wright was pulled from the stream, almost exhausted, by Cecil Dalton, a companion, who rushed to the scene from a spot 100 yards up the river. Mrs. Dalton, another member of the picnic party, was seated on the bank watching Calvin, the small son of the Wrights.

Mrs. Wright was a former resident of Daly City, having lived here for two years, and had many friends in this city, who are grieved to learn of the tragedy. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Haas, of Sunrise, Wyoming. She is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Amanda, Floyd, James and Raymond Haas, all of San Francisco.

The tragedy occurred near the gravel bunkers on the Jerome Hobson ranch, at a spot opposite and midway between Mirabel and Rio Del Rio resorts. Wright was fishing about 50 yards downstream, while his wife went for a swim. Dalton had gone up the river to don a bathing suit and was partially undressed when Mrs. Dalton screamed for help.

A moment before Mrs. Wright had waived gaily to her son and Mrs. Dalton. Hearing Mrs. Dalton's shrieks, both Wright and Dalton rushed for the spot.

According to Mrs. Dalton and Wright, Mrs. Wright was struggling in deep water. She did not utter a cry, they said. Wright, fully clothed, leaped into the water and made a valiant but futile attempt to save his young wife. Her body was recovered 40 minutes later.

The accident occurred at about 2:30 in the afternoon.

THANKS AND APPRECIATION

The large vote cast in the recent high school election was an indication of the general interest of the community in school affairs. The substantial majority given in favor of the proposal to raise funds with which to construct a shop building for the high school was a guarantee that the people of this district want for their children the best educational advantages that can be provided. The progressive spirit of our community thus took another step forward. As a result, we shall have an increased number of home seekers move into our district and a continuation of its healthy growth. Friday's election told the world that we live in a progressive community.

To each and everyone in the entire district who contributed in any way to the successful outcome of the election the undersigned wish to express their thanks and appreciation. (Signed.)

T. BENTLEY, President.
A. GEHRINGER.
S. L. JENSEN, Clerk.
L. W. STARK.

Mayor of Daly City.

BAN IS ASKED ON HOT DOG STANDS

Hot dog stands, souvenir-selling kiosks and other concessions, many of which are in San Mateo county, are unsightly blemishes to the scenic beauty of California highways, according to an appeal made by the central coast regional advisory council of the California Development Association to the board of supervisors of San Francisco county. The San Francisco supervisors are asked to take action on the matter in order to focus public attention on this menace. It was pointed out that these concessions not only spoil the pleasure of tourists, but tend to impair one of California's most valuable resources.

Shower for Popular Couple

Hugh Ridges has filed a damage suit to collect $76,285.45 from A. Rossi and S. Rossi, as the aftermath of an automobile accident at the intersection of Dwight road and Peninsula avenue, Burlingame, on December 3, 1927. Ridges claims that A. Rossi was driving in a careless and reckless manner a car owned by S. Rossi, and that he collided with his automobile and damaged his car and inflicted injuries upon him that have proved permanent.

SEEK REDUCTION IN TELEGRAPH RATES

In one of its most far-reaching orders of recent years the Railroad Commission on Wednesday directed its attorney, Carl I. Wheat, to file a complaint against the Western Union Telegraph Company before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, D. C., asking that this company be required to reduce its rates for all interstate business in which service in California is concerned.

This order was made in a case involving rates for press dispatches wholly within the state, and while a certain increase was allowed to the telegraph company on this business, on the ground that the present rates are actually below out-of-pocket cost for such service, the Commission found that, by the company's own figures as presented in hearings before Commissioner Leon O. Whitsell during the progress of the case, the Western Union is earning a return from the California portion of its interstate business of from 20 to 40 per cent upon the fair value of its California properties devoted to such service, depending upon the basis of valuation used.

In view of this finding, the Railroad Commission declared that it would be derelict in its duty to the public if the facts were not laid before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has jurisdiction over interstate telegraph rates. It was pointed out that a reduction of this company's earnings on the California portion of such business to a 7 per cent earning basis would involve a reduction in charges to its patrons in excess of $2,000,000 per year.

The order of the Commission declares that, even with the increase allowed, the press dispatch business of this company for messages wholly within the state will still be a profitless service, and it was recognized that, under certain decisions of the United States Supreme Court, the state Commission possess no authority to require the rates to remain on the present loss basis. The increase allowed amounts, however, to only about $7,700.

This case is reminiscent of the situation involving express rates to eastern points which culminated in the drastic reductions in such rates made by the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1923.

MODERN COPORATION LAW FOR CALIFORNIA

Plans for a modern corporation law for California were launched at a meeting in San Francisco on Monday last of the committee on corporation law of the State Bar of California.

It is expected that, as a result of the committee's effort, a complete draft of a new corporation act will be in readiness for discussion at the annual meeting of the State Bar at Pasadena, October 11, 12 and 13, and for presentation to the legislature in 1929.

The corporation law of California is contained in the Civil Code, which was enacted in 1872. Since then there have been many amendments to the law which have tended to confuse it with the result that it is now in a chaotic condition. It is for the purpose of clarifying and modernizing the law that this revision is to be made.

BOY'S DEATH DUE TO HEART TROUBLE

Donald Le Roy Kinhead, 11-year-old Redwood City boy who died last Saturday night after having attended a meet of the Y. M. C. A. group at Millbrae, had taken on part in the athletic contests of the day, it was testified at a coroner's inquest held in Redwood City. Death was due to chronic heart trouble, the coroner's jury decided. It had been reported that the boy had taken part in the contests, dying shortly afterward, presumably as a result of over-exertion. Officials in charge of the Millbrae gathering, described as a powwow of a Friendly Indian group, said the boy was not allowed to participate in sport events under the auspices of the organization, and that he was not a Boy Scout.

STRUCK BY MACHINE
WHILE REPAIRING TIRE

Maxim Radich, of San Francisco, suffered fractures of both arms and both legs, and William S. Beall, also of San Francisco, sustained cuts and bruises as the result of being struck by another car while repairing a tire on their machine, early Monday morning on the highway at Menlo Park. John Pacheco and Louis Stenger, of San Francisco, were landed in the county jail at Redwood City and are facing charges of illegal possession of liquor and reckless driving.

SUPERVISORS DENY
CANDLESTICK POINT
BRIDGE FRANCHISE

In accord with the stand taken six weeks ago, the San Mateo county board of supervisors acted unfavorably last Monday on two applications for bay bridge franchises.

By a vote of three to two in each instance, the board rejected the application of Albert Mansfield for a franchise for a bridge between Candlestick Point, San Mateo county, and Alameda, and that of Frank E. Webb for a franchise for a bridge between Bay Shore Point, San Mateo county, and Bay Farm Island, Alameda county.

It was the Mansfield project which came before the board twice in March and definitely placed that body on record as opposing any bridge which might endanger San Francisco's attempt to procure a centrally located span. At the first hearing the supervisors voted to grant the Candlestick Point franchise. Then a week later the action was rescinded.

Following the rejection of his application last Monday, Mansfield indicated that his backers may resort to litigation to force granting of the franchise. They contend, he said, that after once voting favorably on the application, the supervisors had no legal right to reverse the decision.

Letters in protest against the granting of the franchises were read by County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese from the supervisors of San Francisco and from the city of Alameda, and a personal protest was made by City Manager Clifton Hickok of Alameda.

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey made a strong plea for a continuance in the matter of the Mansfield application, stating that he believed the application should be kept alive and before the board until such time as San Francisco's efforts to obtain a permit for a bridge from Rincon hill were definitely ended.

A motion to postpone action until July 2 was defeated, after which Attorney Mansfield withdrew his application and the request of Colonel Webb was unanimously denied.

After a representative of the Redfield, Vanevera Company of Los Angeles explained to the board that he had made an error in bidding for the $45,000 bond issue of the East Palo Alto water district and offered a premium of $3,250 instead of $325, his bid was rejected and the bonds ordered sold to the Fidelity National Company of Los Angeles, who offered par, accrued interest and a premium of $725.

Definite acceptance of the provisions of the Tri-County Highway District were filed with the board and a letter from State Senator M. B. Johnson strongly commended the supervisors for their action in approving the plans for the coast highway district and urged continued co-operation with the supervisors of San Francisco and Santa Cruz counties.

PENINSULA DAIRYMEN TO PICNIC TOMORROW

The third annual picnic and barbecue for all the county dairymen and their families will be held at Menalto Park, opposite the U. S. Veterans' hospital, near Palo Alto, on Saturday, May 19.

A special feature of this year's picnic will be an exhibit of cows from herds of members of the Cow Testing Association. These animals are to illustrate high and low producing cows and are to be judged as to their production by the dairymen, after which the official records will be disclosed. Several professors from the California Agricultural College will be present and deliver short talks on subjects of interest to the dairymen. All dairymen and their families are invited to the picnic and the free barbecue dinner to be served at noon.

TRUSTEES INSTITUTE WILL BE HELD JUNE 2

In a letter addressed to the school trustees of San Mateo county, Pansy Jewett Abbott, superintendent of schools of San Mateo county, announces that there will be an annual Trustees Institute held in the Court House at Redwood City on June 2, at 10 a. m. At that time Mr. Sam H. Cohn, deputy superintendent of public instruction, will be one of the speakers. In the afternoon there will be a round-table discussion concerning district support. The question of employing an attendance officers for San Mateo county will also be a matter for consideration.

The sessions are open to the general public, and Miss Abbott announces that she will be pleased to see every trustee in San Mateo county, as well as teachers, present.

SHALL MERCHANT MARINE PERISH?

"For ten years not a single deep water steamship for our international ocean commerce has been built in this country," is the startling statement made by William Francis Gibbs, shipping authority, in the current issue of Forbes Magazine.

"This means that the merchant fleet the American people now have is sinking toward the end of its life without a single constructive step in any ship yard looking to its preservation through actual ship building.

"We are a great manufacturing nation—except in the shipping field. Why business men and forward-minded manufacturers seem to view American shipping with indifference is an anomaly that seems to contradict itself when we consider our enterprise in other fields. During the ten years following the war, our sole shipping construction has been vessels for nearby or protected trade, ferry boats, car floats, river boats.

"Yet the United States has a foreign trade equal to about 15 per cent of the entire world's commerce; on September 30 of last year less than 3 per cent of the entire ship tonnage of the world under construction was credited to this country; out of a total of 3,000,000 tons of the world shipping, the United States was constructing a grand total of only 91,000 tons. The only countries of lesser ship construction were Sweden and Russia.

"Why has there been opposition to new construction and upkeep development? Because, it has been argued, we should not build until and unless these vessels are built for private ship operators. The answer to this lies in the law that specifically provides that these vessels shall not be sacrificed, but shall pass into the hands of private operators, when such operators can give suitable guarantees for continued operation.

"We are going through a transition period. The major and fundamental question involves the construction of new ships before our present fleet is outworn through obsolescence and breakdown. New construction can not wait.

"If Congress hesitates to make it possible for private owners to build ships for the foreign trade, it should provide that ships may be built to supplement the government fleet, and thus maintain its efficiency which will be an asset when the time comes for private owners to take it over."

GREAT INCREASE IN USE OF MILK SHOWN

A remarkable increase in use of dairy products, particularly market milk, in California is disclosed by the annual statistical review just issued by the California Department of Agriculture, declares Sam H. Greene, secretary of California Dairy Council.

During 1927, every man, woman and child (average) used three gallons more of market milk and one pound more of butter than in the previous year; also consumed an extra quart, or thereabouts, of ice cream, an additional half pound of cottage cheese and an extra slice of hard cheese.

Production also was greater, and the California dairy farmer received $84,807,000 for his product at the farm, compared with $72,383,000 in the previous year, although his unit prices were slightly lower.

Use of milk "between meals" has been one contributing factor to the 1927 increase, Greene said. In the city of San Francisco alone more than 1,000 gallons are sold daily over the counters of "milk drink" stands of various sorts, and the same general ratio will apply to the rest of the State. This business has existed for years, but a better public knowledge of food values of milk gave it an impetus during 1927, which is continuing.

MOTOR TOURIST TRAVEL INCREASE IS FORECAST

Motor tourist travel in California this year may show a record increase over any previous year, according to indications at touring bureaus of the California State Automobile Association in thirty-one cities. From every Association office and from offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California in the south come reports that inquiries for touring information, not only from resident motorists but from visitors or by mail from those planning to visit the state, are running at the rate of three for every two a year ago at this time. Thousands more cars are expected to be driven to California this year from every other state in the Union.

Indicative of the early opening of the touring season is the Association Touring Bureau report for March showing that 27,850 motorists were personally served over bureau counters during the month with latest, up-to-the-minute road information and maps for planned tours in California. In addition more than three times this number were provided with information over the telephone.

Transcontinental routings, mainly sent East in answer to inquiries from those planning trips to California, totaled close to a thousand for the month.

Air sickness is said to be avoided by inhaling a combination of oxygen gas and cinnamon, supplied by German airports before a passenger takes off.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

More than 1,000,000 boys and girls are enrolled in the California elementary and secondary educational system. It was announced last week by William John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction.

Sacramento's famous "Days of '49" celebration, which drew visitors here from all sections of the country in 1922, will be held again next year between June 29 and July 7. It was announced by a committee of civic leaders.

Somebody once said that government is America's most costly luxury. Be that as it may, State Controller Ray L. Riley produced figures a few days ago showing that Californians are paying $19.94 every second for the privilege of being governed. Through their state, county and city officials, they are paying out exactly $1,700,000 a day, $71,784 every hour, $1,146.40 every minute. The machinery of government during the last fiscal year, states Riley, was greased with $629,225.108.33.

Los Angeles was awarded the 1929 national Shrine convention, according to word received from Miami, Florida, last week. No other city entered a formal bid. The session will be held June 4, 5 and 6. Clyde I. Webster of Moslem Temple, Detroit, was elected imperial outer guard of the Ancient Arabic order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This post leads eventually to the highest office.

"The intoxicated driver is the most dangerous person on the highways today." This is the indictment of the "ginned motorist" as made at Sacramento by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles, in instruction to traffic officers to continue the drive to rid the highways of this menace. Incidentally announcement is made that eighty drivers lost their licenses for this offense during the first three months of 1928.

By reason of the fact that his name led all the others among the Al Smith delegates on the Democratic ticket at the primary election James D. Phelan of San Francisco, former United States Senator, is being mentioned as the probable head of the California delegation at the Democratic convention in Houston. The selection of their chairman is now occupying the California delegates, following Smith's sweep of the state.

Superior Courts over the entire state will begin to operate under a uniform system of rules, August 1, a system planned to speed up court trials and do away with considerable "red tape," which clogs court calendars now. The State Judicial Council announced this last week at the conclusion of a two-day session held in San Francisco. The new set of regulations will be sent to the various Superior Court judges to be signed and then will go into effect in August without further ceremony.

Two highway contracts, involving the expenditure of approximately $150,000, were signed last week by Bert B. Meek, state director of public works. For surfacing of the Placer-ville road to Lake Tahoe between Fresno Pond and a point near River-ton, in El Dorado county, the contract went to Harold Smith of St. Helena on a bid of $16,932, against the state's estimate of $17,500. Another contract, for grading and surfacing of the Bayshore highway between Broadway station and Fifth avenue, San Mateo county, was awarded to E. W. Wood of Stockton on a bid of $133,370, as compared with the state's estimate of $169,032.

On the highways of California there is no speed limit—under certain conditions. Motorists may roll along at 45 or 50 miles an hour, or faster, without going to jail or paying a fine, if they can prove, after they're arrested, that their speed was not unreasonable or imprudent and did not endanger life, limb or property. Such an interpretation of the "speed limit" provisions of the state motor vehicle act was made a few days ago by City Justice Earle J. Church of Fresno in dismissing a speeding charge against Philip Conley, an attorney. And the judge's decision was concurred in by officials of the California State Automobile Association.

Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan was, last week, assigned the task of finding a Scotchman whose surname starts with "Mac." Joe Mormolstein of 5033 South State street, Chicago, addressed the following request to Secretary Jordan: "Would you be so kind as to inform me if a certain Scotchman died in California within the last two years? The name was Mac—something, and I knew him in New York City some 30 years ago."

Convicts arrived at the Southern end of the Carmel-San Simeon highway last week, and actual construction of this important link of the all-coast highway will begin immediately. Additional convict road laborers will be added to the state prison camp at Salmon Creek Falls, near the Monterey county line, as soon as the work gets underway. Under the present program it will only take three years, instead of five, to complete this spectacular piece of scenic coast highway, which connects the old coast highway at San Luis Obispo with the Monterey peninsula.

Fifty-eight names appear on the May parole calendar of San Quentin Prison, announced a few days ago by the state board of prison directors. In addition, there are ninety-five convicts now serving indeterminate sentences who will appear before the board to have their terms fixed.

San Anselmo sold its jail for $5 last week. Built six years ago the jail housed only two prisoners in that time and the community decided to beautify the city hall by removing the jail addition.

Reports submitted by county superintendents of schools to the state department of education show that during the school year ended June 30, 1927, for every man in the teaching profession as it related to the public schools there were nine women engaged.

Lieut.-Gov. Burton Pitts had his right leg amputated last week at the government veterans' hospital at Sattelle, it was announced. Pitts has been in the hospital for observation since May 1, having again suffered trouble from the leg, on which seventeen previous operations have been performed as the result of its injury by shrapnel in the World War.

The so-called "road-hogs" a few days ago were blamed for more than 50 per cent of California's highway accidents in recent months, in a survey by Major Louis La Place, chief of the bureau of statistics of the division of motor vehicles. Backing up his conclusion that the failure of some motorists to yield the right of way, caused more than half the accidents, La Place said, 539 accidents were directly caused by road hogs.

The longest sports contest on record between the University of California and Stanford is about to enter into its fourth year. "Time out" will be declared during the summer vacation period at both institutions and in the fall the respective teams of both colleges will go into "huddle" again and resume play. The contest is the chess game began in January, 1925. Seven men on each team combine brains for each play and each move is carried on by mail.

California is in the midst of astounding developments in aerial transportation. Three agencies have combined to make the state a model for a national system of airways. Working quietly for many months they have already achieved almost incredible results. Other projects of great importance and magnitude are now under way. Behind this tremendous but unnoted progress stand these three agencies: The Airways Division, Aeronautics Branch, Department of Commerce; the Daniel Guggenheim Foundation for Promotion of Aeronautics and the Standard Oil Company of California.

San Francisco paid the largest and the smallest inheritance tax in California during the period between December 6, 1927, and May 7, 1928. It was revealed recently. The largest tax paid was for $750,000, representing partial settlement on the estate of the late Adolph B. Spreckels. The smallest was for 43 cents, on the estate of W. Popplein. Figures sent by the city treasurer, John H. Thieler, to state controller, Ray L. Riley, showed a $750,000 increase in inheritance tax collections over the same period a year ago. The total for the period ending May 17 was $1,845,637. For the period a year ago collections were $1,093,490. Fees retained in the city treasury more than doubled, from $3,691 a year ago, to $7,572 this year. Nearly 1,300 more accidents involving railroads and street cars occurred in California during 1927 than in 1926, and the resultant loss of life increased more than 15 per cent, an announcement made by the state railroad commission shows. During 1927, there occurred 5,467 mishaps ranging from grade crossing collisions to persons slipping while stepping from street cars. These caused the deaths of 353 persons and brought injuries to 4,380 others. Compared with those figures are the 1926 totals showing 4,195 accidents, 301 fatalities, and 3,499 cases of more or less serious injury.

California's new system of nominating candidates for the posts of United States senator, congressman, state senators, assemblymen and appellate judges will have its first "workout" this year in preparation for the primary election to be held August 28. At the last legislature, the old plan of nominating candidates by the circulation of general petitions was abolished. In its place was substituted the method of securing the support of a certain number of pledged sponsors. Superior California's second forest fire of the season, occurring last week near St. Helena, Napa county, was reported to State Forester M. B. Pratt. The fire burned over about 160 acres and was brought under control the same day. Several weeks ago, a small blaze occurred in El Dorado county, but did no appreciable amount of damage.

California's bill for school books is experiencing a shrinkage, due to the work of the state printing office in their production, that the citizenry is going to learn of with much satisfaction. A cut of approximately 66 2-3 per cent in costs is not to be overlooked, with so many other places in which the saving can be utilized. The office has just completed the printing of 25,416 copies of arithmetic books No. 1, at an average cost of 21 cents, the total being $5,336. At the publishers' quoted prices, these books would have cost the state more than $15,000.

PULLED FIRST OF TRIPLE STEALS

Harry Davis Given Credit for Engineering Play.

In a game at those old Columbia avenue grounds in Philadelphia, Harry Davis engineered what is probably the first triple steal in the history of the game. In this game the Athletics had the bases full with Davis being the runner on third. After the pitcher had the next Athletic batsman in the hole with "two and nothing," Davis figured that he would certainly "waste" the next ball, and quickly flashed the signal to the other runners to start with the pitch.

As the pitcher started his windup, Davis, who was a slow runner, and therefore receiving scant attention from the opposing pitcher and catcher, dashed for the plate, the runner on second started for third, and the runner or first headed for second. Harry had figured the play right—the pitcher "pitched out," and the batter being a right-hand batsman, this gave Davis an opening to slide over the plate with the run, the runner on second reached third, and the runner on first stole second, completing a triple steal.

Harry Davis is also responsible for an addition to the "squeeze play"—one that scored two runs on a "squeeze bunt" instead of only one. The Athletics introduced this "double squeeze" play in 1913 and worked it successfully six out of seven times that season, scoring two runs on a bunt on each occasion.

The only time it failed to work was once against Washington, when, with nobody out and runners on second and third, Barry bunted a looping, little liner right into the hands of Chick Gandil, the Washington first baseman, who was tearing in to field the bunt, and the latter completed a triple play, as both runners were so far advanced they were unable to return to their respective bases.

Lust of Power Great Peril That Faces Stability of the American Nation

By REV. DR. HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, New York.

MANY sins come out of weakness, but all the great tragedies of history have come from the Pilates who could say, "Knowest thou not that I have power?" Look at our nation today. Where is the real peril of the republic? To be sure, we are facing a dangerous situation from the kind of crime that is bred in city slums, that rises in gangs of youth, often degenerate, who commit murder and spend most of their lives intermittently in prison. But the republic will not ultimately go to pieces over that situation. There are, however, men of ability—they might even hold positions in the President's cabinet, they might even rise to the highest places in America's industrial life where, at the top, the competition is terrific and sieves out all but the ablest.

"They are not feeble-minded, but like Pilate in the magnificent administrative system of Rome, have risen to the top because strong, and such men in the last few years, defying the courts, despising the government, contempting the people, have presented to the world one of the most devastating spectacles of political corruption in the history of government. And as they propose to get away with it you can hear the echo of the old words, 'Knowest thou not that we have power?'"

There are two kinds of disaster—one caused by destitution and weakness, the other by misused wealth and power. And sometimes it is hard to say which is worse. But there is always hope in power. Think of the opportunity some of you business men have in an industrial situation whose crucial difficulties come not from feebleness but from tremendous strength; to stand in your influential place and say, "I have power to release Christ." Think of the opportunity that we as a nation have in working for peace against war. That goal never can be reached without us. God further to their favorable end the present program of multilateral treaties outlawing war for us as a nation have power to release Christ.

Old Time Distinctions Between Right and Wrong Becoming Sadly Confused

By BISHOP MANNING (Episcopal), New York.

The old sanctions have lost their meaning for great numbers, who are today adrift both spiritually and morally. Once they knew what was right and what was wrong; now they are confused. They see things tolerated, excused, defended by those in high places, by some even calling themselves Christians, which a short time ago would have been condemned. We see such things as free love, companionate marriage so-called, easy divorce discussed, presented in reputable papers and magazines, as though there were two sides to those things.

We need a clear call to the standards of Jesus Christ. He leaves us in no doubt as to where we stand on those questions and others like them. Christ himself is our moral standard.

People cannot advocate, defend and practice such things as companionate marriage and easy divorce and still be respectable members of society.

Present-Day America Given Over to the Idolatry of Pleasure

By REV. DR. J. C. MASSEE, Boston.

If I were asked to name the god of America, I would erect an idol of pleasure and say "Here is your god, oh America." The idolatry of pleasure is more prevalent than any other idolatry in America these days; the mad scramble for indulgence of the senses; the wild pursuit of thrill; the idolatry of dress and of lawlessness. Pleasure in the life of America, in the church, and in the life of the individual, has a far greater formative influence than Christ.

The use of tobacco by women is a sign that while men are becoming more conservative, women are tending in the other direction. I am not saying that women ought not to smoke. But I would estimate that 50 per cent of the women do smoke, and I think that the most symptomatic thing in our age. If I read the signs rightly, it means that while men are going more and more toward conservatism, women are headed in the opposite direction.

Great Mission of Country's Women's Clubs Is Spread of Political Education

By MRS. WILLIAM R. ALVORD, Women's Clubs Official.

The education of women for the discreet use of their vote has progressed far since the passage of the Nineteenth amendment. But there is still a lot to do and it can best be done through women's clubs throughout the country. Women must realize that even when there is not a clear-cut line of demarcation between two candidates for an office, she should still study the situation and the candidates' qualifications before she lets pass the chance to register her choice.

There is extensive missionary work to be done by the organized women of the country among the unorganized. Club women have an opportunity of gathering valuable information on the political situation and are taught the immense importance of a wise use of their vote. These women should instill the same principles in the nonmembers, not for the purpose of obtaining their membership, but for the purpose of getting out the woman's vote.

Giving Judge More Power Would Aid Administration of Criminal Law

By EMORY R. BUCKNER, Ex-United States Attorney.

The judge should be the thirteenth juror and the third lawyer in the American courtroom. The judge is perhaps the most experienced man in the courtroom, and yet he is padlocked to such an extent he does nothing but preserve order and rule on objections while the partisan lawyers work on the jury. When the judge charges the jury he must not give the slightest indication of his own views. Instead, he confines himself to the seldom-understood law, or if it is a review of the facts he must not indicate his own judgment of truth.

The administration of criminal law needs many other reforms, but unpadding our judges would work a miraculous change overnight. If the judge thinks that the defendant has been proved guilty, let him tell the jury so. Why the secret? Why the mystery? If he thinks the defendant has not been proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt he already has the power to direct an acquittal.

CAN'T PRAISE IT ENOUGH

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her So Much

Kingston, Mo.—"I have not taken anything but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for 18 months and I cannot praise it enough. I weighed about 100 pounds and was not able to do any kind of work. My housework was done by my mother and my out-of-doors work was not done. I have taken four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and now I am well and strong and feel fine. I got my sister-in-law to take it after her last baby came and she is stronger now. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. HATTIE W. EASTIN, R. 1, Kingston, Missouri.

X-RAY WONDERS

In no branch of physics have more amazing revelations been made in recent years than in that which deals with the properties of light rays. Since the discovery of X-ray some thirty years ago, the various properties of this phenomenon have been the subject of continual research and experiment, leading to its wide employment in surgery and therapeutics.

Now a new series of remarkable experiments with X-rays has been reported by Dr. Diffenbach of the Flowers hospital in New York, who has produced many modifications and peculiarities in chicken hatching from eggs previously subjected to their mysterious influence.

Exposure of the eggs to the rays produced chickens with deformities of various kinds, some without wings. Longer exposure tended to increase the percentage of females hatched out. In some instances a decidedly superior "breed" of chickens was produced, being larger, earlier layers and producers of more eggs than the stock from which the eggs came.

Heretofore similar experiments with fruit flies had developed many new varieties of these insects, but Dr. Diffenbach's experiments are said to have been the first successfully conducted with higher animal life. This leads to the belief that beneficial results may be obtained in the case of larger animals, and ultimately in man, by pre-natal X-ray treatment.

It seems that our scientists, in spite of their astounding discoveries, have as yet only begun to penetrate a few of nature's secrets. What the future holds for mankind in the mastery of the natural forces everywhere about us no one can foretell.

JUNKING THE BUNK

Following the now popular debunking sport, a recent writer disposes of some old ideas in the following fashion:

Cancer is not hereditary.

Sulphur and molasses are not good for children in the spring, or at any other time.

Linseed poultices depend for their value entirely upon their heat; the linseed has no effect.

Mild winters do not necessarily fill the graveyard, but are more healthful than severe ones.

Gas stoves are not unhealthful; neither do they dry the atmosphere unduly.

Owls do not avoid daylight, and cats do not see any better at night than other animals.

Ostriches do not bury their heads in the sand, and a beaver does not use his tail as a trowel.

Alligators do not attack man, but crocodiles do.

It may be added that horsehairs in a rain barrel do not turn into snakes.

WELFARE OF WORKERS

The growing tendency of big industrial concerns to safeguard the health of their workers is pointed out in a recent bulletin issued by the United States Department of Labor, which particularly stresses the improvements which have been made in providing medical attention and nurses.

In the case of 375 plants covered by the bulletin, it was found that in 1927 all except two were provided with regular dispensary or hospital equipment; 311 employed doctors and 332 employed nurses. In 1916 the same plants were without any of these facilities, except 110 out of the 375 had some sort of first aid equipment.

This is only one phase of the movement in industry for the welfare of the workers. Improved sanitary conditions, safety devices, and facilities for recreation and entertainment are among the means employed by forward looking employers for the health and happiness of their employees.

The beneficial results obtained in these respects are not due to the efforts of professional reformers and up-lifters. They are due to the sound judgment of practical business men who realize that the workers are the most important factor in making a business successful. Anything which contributes to their welfare is reflected in increased loyalty and efficiency.

DEATH OF TWO LEADERS

Through the sudden deaths of Senator Willis of Ohio and Congressman Madden of Illinois within the last few weeks, several peculiar political results have come about. It is a coincidence that earlier in the present session of Congress a bill having for its object the disposition of Muscle Shoals was known as the Willis-Madden bill, having been sponsored in the Senate and House by these now deceased legislators.

Senator Willis died during a demonstration in his honor in his home town, after his name had already been printed as a presidential candidate on the primary ballots of his state.

Mr. Madden had just been renominated for Congress a few days before his death, having as his opponent in the primary a negro, who may now be elected, as the district is composed mostly of negro voters.

As chairman of the powerful Appropriations committee, Mr. Madden was just before his death trying to reconcile the differences which exist between President Coolidge and Congress over important measures, and his strong hand will be missed by the administration forces.

CAMPAIGN PROBERS

By unanimous vote the Senate has passed a resolution providing for an investigation of expenditures by candidates for President. There is no reasonable objection to such an investigation.

But it might be well also to call attention to the publicity which members of Congress are able to obtain for their own candidacies, without expense to themselves, but at the expense of all the taxpayers. We refer to the wholesale distribution of the Congressional Record, filled with political propaganda, sent through the mails without the payment of postage.

Many Senators and Congressmen indulge in this method of campaigning, which gives them a great advantage over opponents who have not the privilege of an official frank. It is just as reprehensible to abuse the franking privilege as it is to spend large sums of private money. More so, because the use of the Congressional Record in this manner is nothing less than graft at the expense of the public.

One of the most active of the investigation advocates in the Senate is now charged with abusing the franking privilege in connection with his candidacy. It would do no harm to investigate the investigators while investigating is good.

EASY FOR THE QUACKS

The ease with which charlatans of all kinds, particularly medical quacks, defraud the public would be incredible were it not for the evidences to be seen on every hand. A few of the schemes whereby the gullible and superstitious have been separated from their money by these swindlers are mentioned in a recent article by Dr. Morris Fishbein.

Soon after Franklin made his famous kite demonstration in electricity, everyone was discussing the wonderful new force. A doctor named Elisha Perkins manufactured a lot of short metal rods, which he claimed were charged with electricity and therefore capable of drawing disease from the human body. He sold many of the rods—one pair to George Washington.

Electric belts and similar appliances have been sold by the millions, not one of which, of course, had any curative value whatever. A few years ago a widely advertised product called Sanatogen had an enormous sale, and testimonials were obtained from many persons of prominence. The stuff was composed of 95 per cent cottage cheese and the remainder glycerine phosphates, neither of any medical value.

One promoter acknowledged making $45,600 profit in a year from the sale of a "chemical ring," supposed to cure diseases of the blood, but in reality no more efficacious than a twine string tied around one's finger.

But we can hardly wonder at the success of quackery in a state of civilization which accepts a mass of medieval superstition as gospel truth.

Some of the radio speeches we have heard were as dull as the well-known thud.

BOY SCOUTS REGISTERING FOR THEIR SUMMER CAMP

Applications for attendance at the Boy Scout summer camp are being registered at the Scout headquarters office, 1901 Broadway, Burlingame, and the number daily received indicates that the maximum limit will be booked before the opening date, June 18. As it is impossible to accommodate more than 200 boys a time, the camp period will be divided into two sessions of a fortnight each. Applicants must register for a definite stay during one of these sessions.

All applications are registered in the order of their receipt, with preference given to those who sign for the first period. The cost to each boy, exclusive of transportation, will be $8 per week for the first two weeks' session, and $7 per week for the second two weeks' session. In return for this outlay each boy will be provided with a comfortable cot in a roomy tent, three substantial meals a day, intensive training in Scoutcraft and plenty of wholesome recreation.

Parents are assured that every possible precaution to prevent illness or accident will be enforced, with qualified physician and a corps of "first aid" Scouts constantly on the ground.

MANY INTERESTING PICTURES COMING TO STATE THEATRE

The State Theatre promises to excel itself next week in the presentation of interesting pictures. Next Saturday, May 19, there will be two features, Marie Prevost and Harrison Ford in "The Girl in the Pullman," and Warner Baxter and Sharon Lynn in "The Coward." There will be a special kiddie matinee. On Sunday, Richard Dix and Gertrude Olmstead in "Sporting Goods," and Lois Wilson in "The Gingham Girl." Monday and Tuesday, May 21 and 22, Colleen Moore in "Her Wild Oat," and Harold Lloyd in "Captain Kidd's Kid." On Wednesday and Thursday, May 23 and 24, Emil Jannings in "The Last Command," also Comedy, News, and other attractions. Friday night will be Novelty Night, the main feature being Olive Borden and Neil Hamilton in "The Joy Girl."

BUSINESSMEN OF HALF MOON BAY ORGANIZE

Thirty business men of Half Moon Bay met at a luncheon Tuesday in the initial movement toward the organization of a Chamber of Commerce that will be completed at a meeting to be held next week. Dr. L. Morgan was named temporary chairman. Streets and other civic improvements will be the first problems of the Chamber of Commerce group. Great enthusiasm was expressed by all the speakers over the prospects for increased growth and development in Half Moon Bay and the advantages of an organized commercial body to aid in properly directing the development was stressed.

MENLO OAKS MAY VOTE TO ANNEX TO MENLO PARK

Plans for the annexation of the Menlo Oaks district to Menlo Park are being discussed by the Menlo Oaks Improvement Club, according to Frank S. Becker, secretary of the club. The proposal was brought before the club at the last regular meeting and if carried will provide for annexation of at least a portion of the well known Timothy Hopkins property, Becker said. The plan as at present proposed may provide for annexation of all the Hopkins estate, thus adding many acres to the recently incorporated municipality.

PENINSULA POLICE PLAN BENEFIT FUND

The organization of a widows' and orphans' fund to be supported by an annual police ball was discussed by the Peninsula Police Officers' Association at a meeting in Redwood City Thursday night. Peter Mahoney, president of the San Francisco Police widows' and orphans' association, and Lieutenant W. L. Mitchell of the San Francisco department, were the principal speakers. The gathering was in the form of a dinner meeting.

OAKLAND MAN CHOSEN AS SAN MATEO HIGH PRINCIPAL

Frank H. Boren, principal of the University high school, Oakland, was selected as the new superintendent of the San Mateo Union high school district by the board of trustees last Monday night. The new superintendent, who received the unanimous vote of the five members of the board for the position, will act as supervisor of the San Mateo Junior College. He assumed his new duties this week.

FISHERMAN GETS IN BAD

It cost Alfred Aulex, of San Francisco, $25 for fishing in La Honda creek, when it was discovered he was using a fishing license designed for issuance only to citizens of the United States. As a result of his conviction he cannot be granted another license during the year. He was arrested by Game Warden Jack Burke, of Daly City.

The staff of The Totem Pole, a weekly publication issued by the student body of Jefferson Union high school, will sponsor a dance to be given next Friday evening, May 25, at the high school.

WHY BOND PRICES CONTINUE STRONG

Why bond prices are strong and are likely to go still higher is explained by Paul Clay, noted statistician, in Forbes Magazine. He says: "Corporation earnings, although a little off from a year ago, are showing signs of improvement and they are likely to make steady gains after mid-summer. The current savings of the investing classes of people have probably not fallen off as much as corporation earnings, because dividends have been increasing and costs of production have been diminishing."

"Commodity prices are rising, but the advances are mainly in agricultural and food products, while industrial materials which enter so largely into manufacturing costs are still very close to the lowest of the whole post war period. There seems little reason to doubt the trend of commodity prices should be downward for some years yet, because plethoric capital is over-expanding plant capacity and plethoric plant capacity is pressing down upon the price level."

"Wages per capita are not rising rapidly; and at the present moment labor costs per unit of output are undoubtedly falling. This means economy in operating expenses and the preservation of the high-saving ratio. Interest rates are advancing, but they are likely to begin declining again, and to show a downward trend into mid-summer. Besides this, money is likely to be easy during the autumn. Probably our national savings will show little or no decline from last year; and perhaps $9,500,000,000 is a reasonable guess as to what they are likely to be."

"The indications point toward a secular upward trend in bond prices for an indefinite period of years."

Scientists have been unable to determine what causes sleep. Some preachers are also puzzled over the phenomenon.

THE RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

Copyright by Barse & Hopkins

WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent returns to New York after nearly four years' absence. Once known as the master criminal, Trent is going straight. The pursuer accuses Trent of jumping overboard from the Pottlandia at Liverpool, but is disappointed when Trent shows no surprise. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. At New York Trent is started to find somebody occupying his house. The stranger is Sutton Campbell, the brother of his best friend, who is serving ten years in prison.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"No doubt," he said equably; "but the police are not here to satisfy the vagrant curiosity of burglars, as you will find."

There was no question in his mind but that this amazing stranger had indeed been waiting for him and was undismayed by the encounter. There was, in fact, an air of triumph about him now which spelled disaster for Trent.

"Perhaps the police may be incutious," the singular personage replied. "But the public is avid for sensation. It would seem an intriguing problem for a newspaper man—or preferably a newspaper woman. I should remind them of the Anthony Trent who wrote entertainingly of a crook he created and styled Conway Parker. I should lament the sad fact that the death of a very wealthy uncle in Australia gave him a fortune and robbed fiction of an ornament."

This mention of Australia was disquieting. Years ago Trent had invented the legend of the rich uncle to account for the sudden alteration in his fortunes. He had long been aware that he had begotten something which might prove very dangerous. Uncles must be accounted for in family genealogies. It would be easy enough to prove that no will had been probated in the island continent which had Anthony Trent of New York as its beneficiary.

"I could assert that your lamented uncle had been my partner and that the money he left you belonged by right to me. It would be a simple matter to compel publicity."

"You know very well you are talking nonsense," Trent said, keeping his temper under control.

"Of course," the stranger agreed. "I admit it; and so are you when you speak of calling in the police. Come, let us chat in a more friendly fashion. After all, it is your house, and you are entitled to consideration."

"You are very kind," Trent said acidly, "but I am going to get out of you what you mean by camping here, and what you want."

"A legitimate curiosity," the other agreed. "Very well. You are Anthony Trent, master criminal. You stole the great Takawaja emerald from Andrew Aphorpe, the Mount Aubyn ruby, the Edgecomb sapphire and the hundred carat Nizam's diamond, and innumerable other things of value. And you have worked so cleverly that you have flouted the police for eight years. Only once were you in danger, and that was in France, when Lieutenant Freylin, formerly of the New York police, denounced you to his adjutant."

Trent sat motionless. Here was a chapter of the dead past rising to condemn him. What more might this mysterious man not know?

"Before Devlin died," Trent said, "he tore up the depositions he would not sign, and I was absolved."

"But not before the documents were read—and remembered. Your adjutant was a lawyer, a man trained to marshal evidence, and kept it in his brain."

So it was Captain Sutton who had betrayed him. The Captain Sutton who had fallen into disgrace and was now in Sing Sing prison. Trent looked at the strange man and determined to talk. There were no witnesses.

"So it's Sutton who gave me away? Trent's face hardened as he considered his treachery. Since that day when Captain Sutton had put his hand on Trent's arm and said kindly, "You played in luck this time, Trent; I wouldn't risk it again," he had done nothing to bring himself in danger of the law. And yet he had been denounced.

"You are wrong," the stranger said, reading his thoughts. "He is not your enemy; you should not harbor hard thoughts of him. You knew him as a very rich man. He is now penniless and in prison for ten years. They no longer know him as Captain Sutton with an honorable war record. He is called by a number now."

"Nevertheless, he has given me away to a stranger; and if he has betrayed me to you, how many more hold my destiny in their hands?"

"I alone know what was contained in Devlin's depositions. I am your friend's elder and only brother. I am Campbell Sutton."

gerous as the police. And, conversely, he would not be as easily disposed of as a burglar.

"I came as by brother's emissary. I am here to remind you of a law which, while it is as old as mankind, has found its way into no statute books. It is the law of compensation between man and man. My brother saved you from many years of prison; that you cannot deny. He thinks enough of you to suppose you will admit this."

"I do," Trent said.

"Ordinarily my brother would never have given another thought to what he did for you. Personally he liked and admired you. When he was confronted with this appalling disaster he called first upon those men with whom for many years he had been intimate. They failed him. Then he thought of you, and put me in possession of those facts of your career which I have mentioned."

"What can I do?" Trent demanded. He recognized that he indeed owed much to the unfortunate Sutton, and he was ready to pay the debt; he had no thought of evasion. "How can I help? If it's money for a new trial, I can certainly be of assistance." His recent investments had been fortunate ones.

"It is not money," Campbell Sutton returned. "I have that. It is something that none of his friends had. In choosing you my brother was not selecting you as the best of a group; he was picking you as the only individual of that group."

Marked uneasiness preyed upon Anthony Trent. What qualities had he that raised him above his fellows? Unwillingly he was forced to admit that there was one thing—should he call it a sport or vocation?—where he had been pre-eminent and without a peer.

"Your brother rates me too highly," he said.

"On the contrary he assigns you your rightful position. You are the only man he knows, or has heard of, who can bring to a successful issue the desire of his heart. Do you know why my brother received that monstrous sentence?"

"I heard it was attempted murder and embezzlement. I could not believe it of him."

"Nevertheless a judge and jury convicted him of using trust monies to cover market losses. It was proved that he had falsified entries."

"Why did he attempt murder? Was that charge justified?"

"He did not try to murder Grant, he tried to injure him, I admit. He found that the man he trusted had betrayed him. Mrs. Sutton was a very beautiful woman who loved gaiety. My brother provided for her lavishly. He thought it a high and noble quality in her that she did not, like many other wives, seek to hold her husband back from going overseas. But he had a premonition that he would never return, and deeded nearly all his fortune to her. It is not a pleasant tale. Mr. Trent. She sent him off because she had grown fond of Payson Grant, and Payson Grant, having control of my brother's business, sought to effect his ruin. That is the whole story."

"Unfortunately my brother conducted his own defense. He could have chosen no poorer counsel. The sight of Grant made him forget everything. He insulted the judge; he contradicted his own testimony. I believe he was for the time insane. He threatened when the trial was over he would kill Grant. In view of the amazing mess he made of it, ten years was a light sentence. He is now doing what he can to prepare enough evidence to justify petitioning for a new trial."

"Surely that won't be easy?"

"Almost impossible for him, situated as he is; and just as difficult for me, who am a quiet man, adverse to society and unused to mixing with my kind."

Trent started to cross-examine.

"You are his only brother. Are you also, afraid of justice?"

"There is nothing in Campbell Sutton's life that can cause him alarm. The manner was rather grandiose, at most absurd."

Trent leaned forward and watched his expressions.

"Then why does an honest man need to clamber over roofs and enter like a burglar?"

"For two very excellent reasons," said Campbell Sutton, without that momentary pause which would tell his hearer that he was lying. "One is that your front door defied my efforts. Another, that I should not be surprised if Payson Grant had made shadowed. He knows I have sworn to make him pay; in his place I should keep an eye on an enemy likely to be dangerous."

Trent thought there was no good purpose served by evading the issue. Campbell Sutton had come neither for money nor sympathy.

"What do you want me to do?"

"In brief, this; you must force a confession from Payson Grant which will exonerate Frank."

"Grant won't make any statement."

Trent said. "Why should he? The law has given him ten years to enjoy stolen property."

"It is the only way. For my part I should be forced to give up the problem as insoluble. With you it is different; you have at your fingers' tips the technique of crime. For you it should merely be entertainment."

"I have abandoned, forever, what you term the technique of crime. What money I have is at Captain Sutton's disposal," Trent said coldly, "and any other legitimate effort will be given gladly, but I will not go back to the old ways."

"One appreciates these delicate scruples and honors you for them. I expected them, in fact. But what concern me now is how soon you can start to pay your debts to a man unjustly condemned to ten years of imprisonment. You would have got more than that but for him."

"I am not going to dispute your brother's services," Trent said quietly. "But if I am forced to it I must point out the difference. It cost him no more than a momentary twinge of conscience to do what he did for me. Consider the situation. It was at a time when every man was needed, and I had a definite use. If your brother had sent me back home under guard he would have lost a man he relied on and also the men detailed to guard me. He shut his eyes to what I had done because he had a shrewd idea I had finished with that sort of thing. And, perhaps, he thought the work I was doing was risky enough to offer small chance of my getting through. For that, I am asked to take the risks of blackmailing Payson Grant. I don't welcome that sort of thing now. I refuse to put my head in a noose for any man."

"You will admit that you could, by some method yet to be determined, abduct Payson Grant and hold him until he confessed."

"It would be difficult, but I suppose it could be done."

"Then you admit the task is not impossible. You have conceded that you might accomplish it and remain undetected. If that is so, Mr. Trent, why not accept it as the lesser risk?"

"Less than what?"

"Than going to prison for the Aphorpe robbery, for instance."

Trent's eyes narrowed. "You would denounce me for the things that are past after knowing I am through with that life?"

"I am sorry, but that is the only way."

Trent laughed. It was an unpleasant laugh that should have warned the other man he was in danger.

"I thought I had finished with violence and crime. God knows I want to forget it. But there's a limit beyond which no man living shall push me. I will not do as you say even for your brother, and I will not go to jail because you denounce me to the police."

"What course is left to you?"

"One that I would rather not take, but one I will readily accept rather than what you propose. Listen for a moment. You are here in my rooms. Technically at least you are a burglar. There is no reason that I should not shoot a burglar, is there?"

"My brother rather thought you might be inclined to violence and perhaps anxious for my safety, arranged if anything prevents by communication with him on or before a given date to call in the warden. Naturally he would claim the rewards that have been offered for you."

Scientists Frown on Idea of Divining Rod

Letters are frequently received by the geological survey, Department of the Interior, asking for the names and prices of the best makes of instruments guaranteed to find diamonds, gold, silver and other metals, and especially buried treasure. The claims of venders of mineral rods and other devices said to be effective in locating precious metals and buried treasure are considered fraudulent by the geological survey. The dip needle or miner's compass has been used with some success in prospecting for iron and other magnetic ores, but the successful use of such an instrument requires considerable experience in surveying, together with the ability to make accurate mathematical observations and deductions. Various types of electrical prospecting devices, the seismograph and the torsion balance, have aroused considerable interest during the last few years. These devices, however, are most complicated and require the services of technical experts specially trained in their use. They would be of no service to one not versed in the principles of geology and physics.

There are 7,000,000 more automobiles in the United States than there were three years ago.

TOAD THOUGHTS

"Wouldn't you like to own an automobile?" asked Harvey Hop Toad of Teddy Tree Toad.

"What would I go with an automobile?" asked Teddy. "I've often sat under my big tree, reading a leaf, and I have heard a toot-toot-toot and a honk-honk-honk and I have thought to myself that there was a great deal of noise and dust and fuss about an automobile."

"Ah," said Harvey, "but think of the way it would carry you along."

"I don't want to be carried along," said Teddy.

"Why not?" asked Harvey.

"Because," said Teddy, "it isn't my business to explore the world."

"I'm not Christopher Columbus. I'm Teddy, the Tree Toad."

"And if I were carried off, where would I want to go? Only to another tree—and then it wouldn't be the same. It wouldn't be home."

"No, the automobile means nothing to me."

"You're strange," said Harvey.

"Why?" asked Teddy.

"Because you don't want an automobile, of course."

"I don't see any 'of course' about it."

"Every one wants an automobile," said Harvey.

"Do they, indeed?" asked Teddy.

"I want one, too," said Harvey, "because it would be so nice not to hop everywhere I went.

"I could toot a horn and say, 'Get-up-auto,' and along I would go."

"You'd have to run it yourself, or else get a chauffeur," said Teddy.

"And there aren't any such things as Toad chauffeurs."

"I'm sure it would be quite beneath the dignity of a boy to be the chauffeur for a toad."

"I feel quite certain of that."

"Oh, dear," said Harvey, "but how nice it would be if I didn't have to hop any more."

"Would you like to be injured so you couldn't?"

"Oh no," said Harvey, "perish the thought! Never could I endure such a thing."

"Well, be thankful, then, that you can hop. Half of us aren't nearly thankful enough that we can crawl or hop or walk or jump."

"Then, too, Harvey, did you ever think how expensive it would be on a toad's earnings?"

"You'd always be worrying yourself thin and pale over whether you could sell enough bugs to buy new tires, and so forth."

"Ah, my dear toad, be a toad, and don't try to copy a lot of people you see."

"And I'll tell you some sensible wishes."

"Tell them to me," said Harvey.

"Wish for good health, bugs, the strength to hop, but don't wish for the impossible and become sad because you can't have it."

"Suppose the sun decided never to shine again. That would be a sorrow."

And Harvey agreed that Teddy was right.

Those Children!

Little Johnny (looking curiously at the visitor)—Where did the chicken bite you, Mr. Billous? I don't see any marks.

Visitor—Why, Johnny, I haven't been bitten by any chicken.

Tommy—Mamma, didn't you tell papa Mr. Billous was dreadfully hen-pecked? Why, mamma, how funny you look! Your face is all red.

Not the Youngest

My small nephew, aged four, had just told me that he had been to a party.

"Indeed," said I. "Why, you must have been the youngest there."

"Oh, no," answered the youngster in a lofty manner, "there was another young man there who came in a baby buggy."

Rightly Awarded

Teacher—I will now present you with an award for being the laziest boy in school.

D. K.—All right. Turn me around and put the money in my back pocket.—The Farmer.

Got a Kick Out of His Job

"What became of that hired man you got from the city?"

"Aw, he used to be a chauffeur, and one day he crawled under a mule to see why it wouldn't go."—Boys' Life.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

POOR BUT HAPPY

"You have been coming to Washington a great many years."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "and I have shown my love of country in doing so."

"You mean you have made sacrifices?"

"Well, I don't exactly say a government is ungrateful, but it doesn't measure up to a big corporation in making up a liberal pay roll."—Washington Star.

With the Spaces

Knobrayne—Every evening before I go to bed I write down my thoughts in my diary. Interesting, don't you think?

Nina—Oh, most. How long have you been doing it?

"About a couple of years."

"Then you must have the first page nearly full."

BALLED UP RIGHT

Hubby—"Poor old Brown is balled up right this time." Wife—"Been in one of his little toots?" Hubby—"No, his wife put a 38 bullet into him last night."

Significant Silence

The orator may find his skill into oblivion sinking. While he with gifts for keeping still. Gains credit for much thinking.

Heavy Dogs

Madge—So Jack is no longer in your good graces. You found your idol had feet of clay, eh?

Ethel—Worse, I danced with him and found he had feet of lead.

Tough!

Gladys—So your parents are going to have your marriage annulled?

Betty—Yes. They think I'm a baby. I just can't make them think I'm old enough to get a divorce.

HE WON'T RUN FAR

"Didja git hold of any dough, Jack, since you broke jail?"

"Yeh, I got 100 bucks for runnin' expenses."

Intimacy With Genius

While he kept silence, he seemed great. His art was fine in paint or putty. He talked an hour—to indicate That maybe he was kind of "nutty!"

Not Too Harsh

Dot—So they're married. Why, she's old enough to be his grandmother.

Margy—Don't be unkind. But she is old enough to be his mother.

No Courting House

Officer—You can't kiss that girl in here!

Harold—But we're here to get married. Isn't this the courthouse?

Officer—Yes, but not the courting house.

Left Him Nothing

"You say that advertising ruins your business?"

"I tried that last year, and the people bought out everything I had in the store."

More Sophisticated

"Dearest," he said, rather sadly. "It doesn't seem like the same old smile you used to give me."

"No, Jack," she returned, "this is a new one. I've been studying at a school of dramatic art."

Telling Her Symptoms

AT A COMRADE'S GRAVE

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

EARLY every American is familiar with the story of the origin of Memorial day—how a group of women in Columbus, Miss., soon after the close of the Civil war, decided to set aside April 26 as a special day for decorating the graves of Confederate dead, how on that date in 1866 they covered with flowers not only the graves of their own kinsmen but of Union soldiers as well, how the story of this gracious act was reported in northern newspapers the next spring and sent a thrill throughout the North and how it led directly the next year to the issuing of the famous Order No. 11 by Gen. John A. Logan which resulted in the observance of a national memorial day from that time on. But not many are so familiar with the story of how a poem also resulted from the action of these southern women and the part it played in doing away with the bitterness which had been carried over from the war between the states.

In Ithaca, N. Y., there lived a young lawyer named Francis Miles Finch. When he heard what the Columbus (Miss.) women had done it inspired him to write the verses which he gave the title of "The Blue and the Gray." When this poem was published it seemed to strike a responsive chord in the hearts of thousands and it was widely reprinted and later set to music and sung. According to one historian, "the singing and reading of Finch's poem did more to re-establish harmony than any of the well thought-out plans of reconciliation of the diplomats."

The late Chauncey M. Depew in one of his famous addresses in referring to the custom of decorating the graves of the soldier dead on Memorial day, said: "Thus out of sorrows common alike to North and South came this beautiful custom." Although the inspiration for the observance of Memorial day came from a group of southern women, it was the large group of northern men who kept the custom alive in its earliest days. This group was the Grand Army of the Republic. The Grand Army of the Republic, or the G. A. R. as it is more familiarly known, was organized in Decatur, Ill., April 6, 1866, at the suggestion of Dr. B. Stephenson and Chaplain W. J. Rutledge of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry. Its membership was composed of northern veterans of the Civil war and at one time this membership reached the total of 400,489.

Perhaps its most famous commander was Gen. John A. Logan who, as previously noted, issued the famous order which led to the regular observance of Memorial day. In the words of one G. A. R. veteran, whose remi-

The Blue and the Gray

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass
quiver,

Asleep are the ranks of the dead:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the one, the Blue,
Under the other, the Gray.

These in the robes of glory,
Those in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the laurel, the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor,
The morning sun-rays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Brothered with gold, the Blue,
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So, when the summer calleth,
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Wet with the rain, the Blue,
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not with upbraiding,
The generous deed was done,
In the storm of the years that are fading

No braver battle was won:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Under the blossoms, the Blue,
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever,
Or the winding rivers be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of our dead:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment-day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.
—Francis Miles Finch.

grew fewer in number and went about their sacred duties more slowly and wearily, all that they had lost in numbers and physical powers seemed returned in moral and spiritual strength. In many villages and cities all over the land, sports are nearly or quite abandoned and the people join heartily with the few veterans in blue as they come together to hold their simple services. All alike seem to realize that it is not for the living. And while there may be tears for them, too, the day is for the memory of the 300,000 Union soldiers who gave their lives that the nation might live.

"Few veterans in blue"—how true that statement is of the men who have kept alive the tradition of Memorial day is more apparent each year when the Memorial day parades wind their way through the streets of American cities and villages. In 1865 President Andrew Johnson stood in a reviewing stand on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington and saw 200,000 men, the soldiers of Grant and Sherman, pass by. In 1915, President Woodrow Wilson stood on the same spot and saw the survivors of that first grand review march once more down Pennsylvania avenue. In 50 years the 200,000 had been reduced to less than 20,000. And that is typical of how the ranks of the men who wore the Blue as well as those who wore the Gray have been reduced by time.

So it is easy to see that the time is near at hand when neither the Gray nor the Blue will be represented in the Memorial day parades which honor the men who lost their lives when the United States was in the throes of the greatest civil war in history. But as the gaps began to appear in the ranks of the Blue and the Gray their places were taken by men who wore the khaki of 1898 and the "O. D." of 1918. For Memorial day now is more than a day of memory for the Blue and the Gray. This is a day for honoring our soldier dead, the countless host of those who gave up their lives in the Civil war, the Indian wars, the Spanish-American war, the Philippine insurrection and the World war.

Conceived as a symbol of forgiveness for civil strife and a nation reunited it has become the symbol of a nation more strongly united than ever before because it honors the memory—not only of the men who fought under two different flags but also the memory of their sons and grandsons who fought and died for one flag. Originating in the South but taken up and made a permanent national observance mainly by the North, the spirit of Memorial day now knows no North, no South, no East, no West. It honors the fighting men of no particular war but of all wars. It is the symbol of America's gratitude to her fighting men who have died in her defense.

or sooner. But the perfect victory was scored only by the perfect courage of a half million American fighting men, and by the heroic sacrifice of many who were left on the field, as the well-timed movements of the drive surged on to seize each chosen objective.

At St. Mihiel

On September 12, 1917, the first American army, trained and operating as a unit, attacked the St. Mihiel salient both from west and south, drove in its sides and collapsed it on the Germans, taking nearly 16,000 prisoners in the operation. After that the St. Mihiel salient never bothered anyone. In taking it, the Yanks took the town of Thiaucourt, and at the edge of that town there later was located the permanent American cemetery, where rest the dead from the St. Mihiel drive, and also the many others who died in training or in battle in that area of northeastern France, which was the training ground of the A. E. F.

Great American Victory

The battle of St. Mihiel, because it was such an almost perfect victory, was regarded by some as an easy achievement. The more than 4,000 dead give no such evidence, for while not that many St. Mihiel dead remain at Thiaucourt, a great many have been brought back to the states these seven or eight years gone. It was a perfect victory in that every objective was taken on schedule time,

A dear old Quaker lady, distinguished for her youthful appearance, was asked what she used to preserve her charms. She replied sweetly: I use for the lips, truth; for the voice, prayer; for the eyes, pity; for the hands, charity; for the figure, uprightness, and for the heart, love.—Jerry Fleishman.

REFRIGERATOR RESERVES

With a good-sized refrigerator one may have on hand for many dishes supplies which help out on the daily menus. Fresh coconut is so far superior to the dried or the canned variety that the labor to prepare it is not considered. Pick out a heavy nut that seems to be well filled with coconut water, puncture one of the soft eyes, wiping around it carefully, then invert over a measuring cup or bowl to save every drop of the precious fluid. After the nut is drained, crack with a hammer or drop on a stone walk to break. Free the meat carefully of all the brown skin with a sharp knife, then proceed to grate the white meat. It may be ground in the meat grinder, but it is much more delicate and keeps better grated after grating add enough sugar to it to sweeten and keep it, cover with a saucer or place in a can with a cover and place in the ice chest where the temperature is about the same. You may use this, a tablespoonful or two at a time for salads, cakes, puddings or candies and it will keep fresh and sweet for two weeks or more.

The water is considered a great delicacy as a drink, and used with the fresh grated nut as a salad dressing with grated carrots, nothing can be more tasty. Add a very little lemon juice and salt with a dash of paprika or cayenne.

There are so many drinks that may be prepared and kept in the ice chest, to be used on a moment's notice. Here is one:

Cocoa Sirup.—Boil together two cups of sugar, one-third of a cupful of cocoa, and one cupful of boiling water for five minutes. When cold add a teaspoonful of vanilla or a pinch of cinnamon. Put away on ice in a glass jar. When serving add milk and top with a spoonful of whipped cream. The children are fond of this drink.

Here and There.

Ideas, suggestions, recipes and hints on serving, cooking and care of a home are always exchanged when a group of women who care for such mundane affairs gather. One of the pleasures of travel, to a home lover, is seeing other architecture, furnishings, arrangement of homes, as well as different foods peculiar to the locality.

As the kitchen is the heart of the home, where the food which makes or mars our lives is prepared, it behooves every thinking woman to put intelligent thought upon it, whether she is a mistress of a household of fifteen servants or the head of a servantless home. Very often, where much wealth is, too little intelligent thought is given to the food for the family. Puny, anemic, willful children, result from improper feeding. Flocks of precious lives are warped or utterly ruined by improper feeding. Each child should be studied, as each has an individuality of his own. Some foods agree and others do not.

If the teeth of this generation last to twenty years of age, the practice of giving little children all-day suckers and ice cream cones so frequently will have to be stopped.

Sweets are craved by the average child, but it may become an obsession, just as the beverage habit controls those who get into its toils. A bit of pure candy after a meal is not injurious, but the constant eating indulged in by the children seen in public places, even with nurses or mothers, is nothing short of criminal.

Children are not allowed to develop strong, white teeth by being given food that is hard enough to take good mastication. Whole wheat, cooked until the starch is cooked and given with top milk, is one of the best possible foods for the teeth as well as growing babies. Teach children to chew, chew and then chew, when they first begin to eat solid foods. Such a habit can be formed as well as a poor one of soaking foods, and eating everything soft and easily bolted.

Few cooks take the trouble to remove the sinews from the legs of the turkey. It is a very simple process and the meat is made vastly more palatable. Make an incision in each leg just where the scaly portion begins, bend the leg back sharply and with a hook or stout fork pull out the tendons. They may cut off, allowing a little surplus skin for shrinkage.

For sandwich filling for brown bread slices: Cut into rounds. Soften a three-ounce cake of cream cheese, adding cream to make it soft to spread season with salt, paprika and a tablespoonful of minced mint leaves. Spread on the bread, garnish the rounds with a sprig of fresh mint dipped in egg and sugar. Nice for open sandwiches.

CLOTHES IDEAS FROM ABROAD

By Mae Martin

Last fall when I was in France, I admired the dress which the daughter of our hostess was wearing, and she confessed it was three years old, originally rose-beige, now dyed a rich, deep shade of red! The French are eternally surprising you with thrifty little tricks like that—tricks which it pays to imitate.

Most of us have dresses which, if allowed to remain their original color, are discarded or seldom worn. Redyed, they become favorites again.

Just get a package or two of true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, and try your hand at tinting or dyeing. You'll be amazed to see how easy it is to use Diamond Dyes. They never disappoint you. The "know-how" is in the dyes. They are real dyes like those used when the cloth was made. They never give things that redyed look, like make-shift, inferior dyes. The more than sixty colors you can get from them include everything that's fashionable.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's FREE. Write for it, NOW, to Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

DALY CITY METHODIST CHURCH

"Fares, Please" will be the interesting subject for the Sunday evening service at the Daly City Methodist church. We are sure that you will enjoy this unique subject.

The morning service has been discontinued and will hereafter be made a part of the Sunday school hour. We invite you to attend our Bible class, under the direction of Mr. Jones, of the Jefferson Union high school.

The Ladies Aid Society is giving a banquet on Wednesday evening, May 23. The proceeds will go to the church. We are in need of funds and we are depending upon the success of the banquet to help us across. Buy a ticket and do your part. Rev. Magnuson will be the speaker, and a good time is guaranteed to all who come.

The Cub Scouts will meet Saturday at 11:30, at which time the organizer will be present and talk to the boys. Luncheon will be served and a good time is expected by all who attend.

The time has come when a great revival should sweep Daly City. A real genuine revival, where folks would be constantly aware of a God consciousness, and they would be willing to stake their lives upon Jesus of Nazareth, and His great program for life.

S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of Churches in America, which includes all the leading denominations of America, said:

"Your suggestion that the old-fashioned revival no longer appeals to educated people is trite. Evidently you are not aware that it seldom, if ever, appealed to them. But what of that?"

"Could they have ruled, the majority of revivalists would have been silenced, from St. Paul to John Wesley and General Booth. All three were deemed mad by some ephemeral wits and accomplished scholars of their day. Society has good reasons for profound thankfulness that the wise of this world have never dictated its religious adventures. These arise in unsuspected persons and places and frequently pursue courses which the prudent condemn and the vicious abhor."

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

DEATH OF MRS. C. HAMILTON

Mrs. Catherine Hamilton, beloved wife of Fred Hamilton and sister of Edward J. Jones, of Landsford, Pa., passed away last Monday at her home on Mission street in the Mt. Vernon Tract. Although Mrs. Hamilton had made her home on Mission street for the past two years, she formerly resided for many years on Peoria street, in the Crocker Tract, where she leaves many friends to mourn her loss. She was a member of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star. The funeral services were held last Tuesday at 2 p. m. from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., 6154 Mission street. Interment was at Masonic cemetery.

It was with much sorrow that the many friends of Mrs. Mary Kuschel learned of her sudden death at her home, 263 Alexander avenue, on Tuesday of last week. Mrs. Kuschel was the beloved wife of Gustav Kuschel and aunt of Sebastian Kiendl. She was a native of Germany. The funeral services were held last Friday at the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., 6154 Mission street. Interment was at Cypress Lawn cemetery.
